EXHAUSTIVE STUDY OF BANKING LAW

Senator Swanson Delivers Speech on Subject in Senate Today.

FAVORS BANK REFORM

Virginia Senator Praises President Wilson. Gives Powerful Reasons for new Currency Law.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—Senator Swanson today delivered a speech in behalf of the Owen currency bill pending in the Senate. He said the measure was wise, prudent and conservative; that it retained all the good features of our present currency and banking system and only eliminated acknowledged evils and supplied confessed additional needs; that it was advantageous in that it continued our present currency without diminishing its volume aggregating $3,600,000,000; that it continued our present system of independent banks, which has been most beneficial in the development of this country. He presented the superiority of the American system of independent banks over systems in other countries with a few large central banks and many branches. He said that under the pending bill the 25,000 banks of this country would continue to do business as heretofore. He pointed out the evils of a central bank, claiming that the advantages of a central bank were far exceeded by the objections to such a bank. He claimed that under the proposed system about 1-40 of the banking capital of the country would be included in the system and about 1-40 of the banking resources of the nation, thus claiming that the vast amount of banking capital resources inaffected by the system would be left for business and accommodation as now existing. He asserted that while the capital and resources of the Federal reserve banks created under the bill were small in comparison to the capital and resources undisturbed by the bill, yet it was ample for the purposes sought to be obtained and made the Federal reserve banks far greater in capital and resources than the Bank of England, the Bank of France or the Reichsbank of Germany, and thus would be more potential in correcting panics and money stringency than these banks.

Said he: "The system veers between helpless weakness and tyrannic strength. It gives the banks of the country neither a master nor a slave, but a strong, vigorous co-worker and assistant."

He maintained that one of the greatest evils existing under our banking system today was the vast accumulation of the reserves of the banks in New York City, which were used largely for stock speculation to the detriment of business. He discussed the panic of 1907, claiming that it was occasioned by the action of the New York banks in suspending payments and refusing to pay to the interior banks the money there on deposit which was necessary for crop purposes. He said the banks of New York City suspended payment with $224,000,000 of reserves, which were never reduced below $125,000,000, during the crisis, while the Bank of England continued payments with reserves of only $125,000,000 which were reduced to $85,000,000. He then proceeded to show that while the banks of New York refused to pay interior banks the deposits due them, yet they had increased their loans during this time, and most of it was for stock speculations. "Here," said he, "we strikingly witness the difference in conduct between a bank with a public responsibility and run for public interest and those run entirely for private interests and profit."

He discussed the importance to the banks themselves and to the business interests of the country that the reserves of the banks in time of emergency should be held in reserve centers as contemplated in the proposed bill where public responsibility would exist and assurance would be given that they would be used for the public good and not for private interests and speculation in time of a financial crisis. He discussed how this was safeguarded under the present bill and indicated the advantages that would accrue to all the banks in the country in making loans and conducting their business without fear when they know that in time of trouble there would be banks of refuge and hope. He approved of the provision of the bill which limited the loans of the Federal reserve banks to commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes. He said a great advantage would accrue to all these interests when the $636,000,000 of resources which would be provided for these banks would be dedicated to this purpose and not used as now for speculative ventures. He claimed that this would insure accommodation to legitimate business and enterprise. He insisted that this safeguarding of these reserves for this purpose was confessedly needed.

He next discussed the issuance of currency under the proposed bill. He insisted that the issuance of currency was a governmental function and should be controlled by the government in the interests of all the people and not for the profit of a few. He discussed the method pursued in England, France and Germany for the issuance of currency and claimed that the method in this bill was more elastic and in addition was safer and more prudent. He said that the limit of the currency that could be issued under this bill if the Federal reserve banks should utilize all of their resources and possibilities for this purpose could not exceed $1,817,000,000. He stated that the Bank of France could issue currency to the extent of $1,600,000,000. He then argued that on account of the greater business of all kinds, greater population, greater need of development and greater commerce, the excess of $217,000,000 over France was fully needed in this country. He then insisted that while the currency was elastic and sufficient, yet it could not produce inflation; that in order for currency to be issued, first the customer must make his application to a member bank, the member bank must approve the application and endorse the loan, and then the reserve bank must endorse the application of this bank and also approve the loan, and then the Federal Reserve Board must approve the application before currency could be issued, and that to secure the currency the security thus endorsed must be deposited and a reserve of 35 per cent kept in addition. He pointed out that this was superior and safer than the safeguards in the banks of either Germany or France. He said that currency could only be issued when there was an urgent demand of business men approved and endorsed by two banks and the Federal Reserve Board appointed by the President. He argued that the passage of the bill would give both an elastic, sufficient and safe currency. He enumerated the advantages to various business sections which would accrue from this opportunity, and how banks in time of stringency and panic would be saved from fear, trouble and doubt.

He next pointed out the advantages which would accrue to the country from requiring the deposits of the United States Treasury to be put in these banks. He said this would give from $125,000,000 to $210,000,000, now locked up, for legitimate business purposes much to the advantage of commerce and trade. He claimed that the banks would be very profitable, and from conservative estimates made by experts would yield the government annually in profit between $12,000,000, and $20,000,000 after paying six per cent interest on the stock to the member banks. He stated that the system could be inaugurated without producing an contraction of loans and without any disturbance. He said that by reducing the reserve requirements of all the national banks and by only requiring five per cent reserve on time deposits more than $400,000,000 now locked up in reserves and of no use to business would be released, and that the release of this amount of money would enable the banks to furnish practically nearly all the capital and reserves required under the proposed plan. He next discussed the advantages which would accrue to banks and the customers and their varied business by this system. He argued that the reserve requirements under the new plan were ample and wore larger than those required in England and France and other countries. He approved of the provision permitting loans upon farm lands and the use extended in the bill of loans upon warehouse receipts given by farmers. He deplored that a system of rural credits for the benefit of farmers was not included in the bill, but was confident that such a measure would be promptly passed. He then discussed the duty of the Democratic party to pass this bill and perform all of its platform pledges. He commended the President for his courage and insistence upon this legislation. He said that statesmanship consisted of both the wisdom to discern the right pathway and also the valor to follow it. He said that the President possesses in a pre-eminent degree this capacity and courage which make real statesmanship. He appealed to the Democratic party to bury all prejudices, reconcile all party differences and to meet its opportunity and discharge its responsibility, and that this would only be accomplished by the House, Senate and President working in harmony. He pointed out in conclusion the necessity of prompt and immediate action on this measure which the entire business interest of the country was awaiting, and prophesied great betterment in the various business of the country upon the passage and operation of the proposed measure. "Which" said he, "makes in the future a monopoly of money and bank credits impossible."

MURPHY SAID TO FACE EVICTION

Conferences Looking to Appointment of Another Tammany Chief

LITTLE HOPE FOR HIM

Should Wilson, Glynn and Mitchell Join Hands, Reform of Organization Will Be Inevitable.

New York, December 8—Charles F. Murphy's leadership of Tammany Hall and of the Democratic organization of the State is threatened more seriously than his intimate friends are willing to admit. It has been suggested in the National Democratic Club, where Mr. Murphy seldom goes that the leader and those who are known to be his confidants are actually not aware of the details and the strength of the movement among influential Democrats to force his retirement.

As proof of this ignorance on the part of those who are supposed to keep Mr Murphy informed of the trend of sentiment in the districts, a prominent Democrat said at the club last night that as late as the Saturday night before last election day it was belived in the Tammany Hall Building in East Fourteenth Street that Edward E. McCall was certain of election as Mayor. Mr. Murphy on that day, it was said on the best authority, bet $7,000 of his own money against $18,000 and thus became a contributor to the $118,000 election winnings which E. E. Smathers gathered in by wagering $200,000 at varying odds on Mitchel during the campaign. This was a private bet, and not for political effect.

As early as last spring conferences were being held in the bowntown districts among influential Democrats prominent in the business and professional world regarding the future leadership of Tammany Hall. Opposition to Mr. Murphy's further domination was the basis of the conference.

STATE CAPITATION TAXES.

Falling off in Number of Voters who Have Qualified.

The general election for members of the City Council of Alexandria will take place six months from tomorrow, and tomorrow will be the last day on which the capitation tax can be paid in order to permit voting in the election. There has been a large falling off in the number who have paid their taxes and members of the city democratic committee and others interested in seeing that Alexandria retains its full voting strength will be busy today and tomorrow in rounding up the delinquents and persuading them to pay their taxes and qualify. Last year there were 1694 persons entitled vote, but up to the present time less than 1200 have paid their poll taxes for this year.

City Treasurer Thomas W. Robinson will keep his office open tonight and tomorrow night for the accommodation of those who will be unable to visit his office in the day time.

The day he cast his eyes on Mrs. Wickler it was love at first sight, and when he found she had a husband in Russia he advanced $5 to send for a divorce. Soon after, Mrs. Wickler's love cooled he says, and now he is suing her for breach of promise and the recovery of $5.80, of which is for the divorce papers, 30 cents for postage, and 50 cents for theater tickets.

Fifty persons, mostly negroes, are reported to have been drowned at Sunnyside, Texas, a small town on the Lower Brazos river. Arthur and Harry James were killed, Thomas Dally and Mary Nicholson were fatally injured by rifle bullets before daylight yesterday into the apartment house in Calumet, Mich., in which they lived. The James brothers yesterday went to Calumet, Toronto, Canada, and obtained employment in the Copper Range Consolidated mine, whose men are on strike. All of the victims were in bed when shot. Six men are under arrest on suspicion.

When Thomas Curtin, ticket examiner at the Pennsylvania terminal in New York, picked up a black traveling bag from the floor of the train shed Saturday, he gasped in astonishment as he saw that it contained a big roll of bills and many apparently valuable articles of jewelry. Curtin turned the bag over to the station master, who found that its contents included $20,000 in bills of large denomination and jewelry afterward said to be worth $100,000. Just after an excited woman, fashionably dressed, appeared at the property office and breathlessly asked if a traveling bag had been found. She accurately described the contents of the treasure bag Curtin had picked up and was given her property. Rejoiced at its recovery and assuring Curtin, whose name and address she took, that he would hear from her, she caught her train for Chicago, then about to leave.

A 116-foot stage in the Arkansas river was reached at noon yesterday at Fort Smith, Ark. The government weather bureau announced the crest will be reached today, with a 17-foot stage. One man was drowned near here yesterday the second victim of the flood.

FOOD PRICES UP TO CONGRESS

One of Promises of Party now in Power to be Carried Out.

MUST GIVE RELIEF

Smith-Lever Bill—Agricultural Demonstration Work Promoted by Agricultural Department.

Washington, Dec. 8—With a gloom of the high cost of living hanging thick over Congress, that body is going to devote a lot of time this winter to efforts to give the consumer some relief. Having promised in the last campaign to cut down living costs the Democratic leaders feel that it is up to them to do something.

The passage of the Smith-Lever bill to promote agricultural demonstration and extension work is one of the measures which Congress will put through This bill, though it cannot at once affect living costs, has for its ultimate object the increased production of American farms.

Agricultural demonstrations and extension work is already being promoted by the Department of Agricultural and by various State agriculture departments or colleges.

The Smith-Lever bill is intended to encourage this movement. It provides for the establishment and maintenance of an extension department in all the colleges of agriculture.

Duties of this department will be to give instructions and demonstrations in agricultural and home economics to persons not attending the agriculture college. In a word, it is intended to train the farmer to do better farming and to train the housewife to keep house. And this training will be given in the various communities so that persons do not have to go from their homes and a tend college to get valuable and up-to-date information about agriculture and home economics.

A fixed appropiation of $10,000 unconditionally, to each State is allowed with liberal additional appropriations amounting to $3,000,000 a year to be apportioned among the States on the basis of rural population. But no State will get its prorata share of this until it has put up an equal amount.

MAY BRING ABOUT PEACE IN MEXICO

Reports that Huerta is Preparing to Negotiate With Carranza

SIGNIFICANT ORDER

Quarrel Between Pancho Villa and Head of Constitutionalists—Rebels Flocking to Capital.

Mexico City, Dec. 8.—Gen. Victoriana Huerta, dictator, and Gen. Venustiano Carranza, head of the constitutionalists, are deep in negotiations for peace, according to well authenticated reports here today.

The reports of a pending agreement between the Huerta faction and the rebels is generally given credence in diplomatic circles, because of the astonishing "inside" news that Carranza and Gen. Pancho Villa have quarreled violently.

Information received here today and regarded as reliable has it that Villa and Carranza are so at loggerheads that Villa had threatened to march on Carranza's headquarters with his army, instead of taking full possession of Chihuahua.

The Carranzistas greatly fear the desertion of Villa and his men. This state of affairs, coupled with the known desperateness of Huerta's situation, is taken by the diplomats as reasonable cause for peace parleys.

An early crisis in affairs at the capital is inevitable. Huerta is at the end of his resources. The people are dissatisfied. Food and fuel are scarce. Those who have watched the situation carefully believe that the present week will bring things to a head in Mexico City.

The capital today is in a state of extreme tension. Many Zapatistas are said to have entered the city quietly within the last few days, and the people are apprehensive of trouble. Zapata rebels have been active within a dozen miles of Mexico City for more than a week. It is said that they have been entering the capital in bunches on pasenger trains. General Huerta today ordered the National Railways not to allow any trains to enter Mexico City with any suspicious looking men in groups.

Huerta's order concerning foreigners and their property is considered as a highly significant indication that Huerta expects trouble in the capital. He issued a general order to the military commanders of the federal district, that in the event of fighting, foreigners of all nationlists and their property must not be molested, but must be allowed to move about freely, leaving the scene of the battle if they so desire.

SCENE AT CHRISTCHURCH

Many Gather to Witness Reproduction of Services Held at Close of Revolution

Christ Church has played its part in the history of the United States in three centuries. The conception of the country is believed to have taken place within its confines during the last quarter of the eighteenth century. Seven years later Thanksgiving services were held after the British troops had departed for home, and, in the early part of the nineteenth century, after the treaty of Ghent, the worshippers gathered and again expressed thanks for their second deliverance from British rule.

Yesterday as many of the present generation who could find accommodation in the old and historic edifice gathered to listen to the reproduction of the services conducted one hundred an dthirty years ago, after the first war for independence.

Among those attending were representatives of various patriotic societies. Rev. Wm. J. Morton, the rector of the church, preached the sermon.

A tribute to George Washington as a churchman was paid by the rector during his discourse. He also said that the idea of some that Washington had lost his religion after the revolution was absolutely without foundation. A description of the services held 130 years ago, from various records obtained pertaining to it, was also outlined by the rector during the course of his sermon.

The rector used the prayer book used then, and also changed from the white surplice to the black gown used on those days. The gown is now among the church's relics, and is rarely used, yesterday being the first time used in a century.

Suspended above the pulpit was a white dove, bearing an olive branch. In the center of the pulpit was a cross of evergreens, and on either side was stars made of evergreens, while texts on the walls were garlanded with evergreens. A number of ferns also added to the decorations of the church.

The original service 130 years ago was conducted by Rev. Dr. David Griffith rector of the church. Mrs. Eleanor Griffith attended as did Mrs. Wm. Rufin Cox, of Richmond, president of the National Society of Colonial Dames of America, and many other distinguished guests, including Miss Comegys, the Regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association, Mrs. Rogers, the vice regent from Maryland, and H. H. Dodge, Esq., the Superintendent of Mount Vernon. The affair was under the auspices of the Colonial Dames of America in Virginia.

Rev. Dr. S. A. Wallis, of the Episcopal Theological Seminary, also assisted in the service, reading the special psalm for the occasion.

The ushers were H. R. Burke, Arthur Herbert, Jr., G. Washington Lewis, and Albert Smoot.

Representatives of the Colonial Dames, Daughters of the American Revolution, Society of Colonial Wars, Society of Cincinnati, and other patriotic organiations, including a number from out of the city attended.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES

Alexandria Lodge of Elks Gather in Opera House to Pay Honors to the Dead

The annual custom of Alexandria Lodge, 758, B. P. O. E. of holding exercises appropriate to the memory of deceased members was observed last night. The services were conducted in the Opera House where many gathered in the auditorium, while the members of the organization occupied seats upon the stage. The stage was prettily decorated with palms and ferns, which were banked on either side, while strings of evergreens were suspended across the hall, and American flags also added to the stage decorations.

The exercises were of the usual impressive nature, and every feature was enacted in a creditable manner. was enacted in a creditable manner carried out and the audience were not only entertained greatly, but the exercises throughout were of a nature to send thrills into the souls of all present. The hour was late when the scene closed.

Representative Thomas U. Sisson, of Winona Lodge, 1088, Mississippi, was the orator. Mr Sission took the place of Representative Flood, who was unable to attend.

He spoke on the order and its ritual paying a tribute to charity, one of the cardinal principles. Mr. Sisson also outlined the purposes of memorial services.

As the names of twenty-eight members, who have answered the "last roll call" since the institution of the lodge in 1902, were called by Secretary Walter M. Donnelly, lights were illuminated forming the following: "Our Absent Brother, B. P. O E., 758." Five stars, with purple colored lights, completed the twenty-eight lights to represent the absent brothers.

The exercises were opened with the overture "Bohemian Girl" by the orchestra, followed by the march, "National Emblem," by the orchestra. The opening cermonies were conducted by Exalted Ruler James W. Bales and officers.

Gray Tunstall, elected clerk of the courts and city treasurer on the face of the returns of the election held November 4, will begin Tuesday, December 16, in the corporation court.

Judge R. H. L. Chichester, of Fredericksburg, who was named by Governor Mann to preside at the hearing in place of Judge Hanckel, who declined because of his opinion that it would not be proper for him to do so under the existing conditions, arrived in Norfolk Wednesday night and after a conference with attorneys for both parties, decided upon December 16.

FLORENCE SCHENCK DYING.

Surgeons Practically Give up Hope of Her Recovery From Operation.

, New York, Dec. 8.—Miss Florence Schenck, the beautiful Norfolk girl whose beauty and daring as an equestrienne captivated the horse show set several seasons ago, and who came into the more garish flight of publicity when she sued Charles H. Wilson, trainer of Alfred G. Vanderbilt's horses, for breach of promise, is reported to be dying here at the Miss Alston's Home for Private Patients

She went there last Sunday to be operated on for a tumor. The operation was performed Friday. It was stated on authority of a friend that the surgeons had practically given up hope at midnight.

Exquisitely beautiful and graceful, Miss Schenck, after her first appearance at New York horse shows, was extremely popular. Until the Wilson affair, she was a welcome member of the gay riding set. She sued Wilson for $100,000 for breach of promise. It was reported at the time that Alfred Vanderbilt had tried to prevent the suit by kindly mediation.

Colfax, Iowa.—A search was instituted for H. M. Wheelock, cashier of the Citizens' State Bank, which was closed by the State banking department. The bank has deposits of nearly $400,000. Bad loans were said to have caused the closing order.

GALE AND SNOW FLURRIES.

Rain of Yesterday Followed by Lower Temperature Last Night.

The weather yesterday was rainy until towards the close when the western heavens became clear and the sun shone brightly. Early in the night the moon and stars were shining, but by the time services began in the churches the skies had again become overcast and the wind, which had been from the southwest, gathered force. Before midnight it had veered to the west and later to the northwest, when old Boreas roared fiercely. About two o'clock this morning the flaws were heavy, causing some anxiety to many who were unable to sleep and were probably meditating on the tornado of the 30th of July last, when great damage was caused.

There were snow flurries at times. No material damage resulted from the wind. In some cases panes of glass, not properly secured in windows, were blown in, while dead branches were twisted from trees.

At an early hour this morning the force of the wind had diminished considerably. The temperature was hovering about the freezing point and the heavens were clear.

The steamer Newport News from Norfolk arrived at this port about on time, although having forged ahead against a fierce head wind most of the night.

Flower Garneds in Bloom.

Onancock, Va., Dec. 8.—Flower gardens on the Eastern Shore of Virginia were in bloom during the past few days. From one garden yesterday roses, violets, heliotropes, daisies, mignonette, candutuft, sweet William, sweet alyssum, verbena, marigolt, nasturtiums, pinks and chrysanthemums were gathered Killed Wife And Himself.

Philadelphia, Dec. 8.—Despondent because he could not support his bride of four weeks, Leon Jodry, 25 years old, a waiter, formerly employed at the Manufacturers' Club, shot her Friday morning, at the home of his mother, No. 2310 South street, and then sent a bullet into his own brain. The girl died at nine Friday night in the Polyclinic Hospital, where both were taken. Physicians say the man will die, too.

The marriage had been kept secret, and was brought to light only when Mrs. Jodry regained momentary consciousness after the shooting. The young woman is 19 years old.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE AT CHRIST CHURCH .

All members of the large congregation which filled Christ Church yesterday afternoon were conscious that it was good for them to have been there, as the services were not only interesting but inspiring. Everything was suggestive of the last two decades of the eighteenth century, when our forefathers gathered in that historic edifice to thank the God of Right who had blessed the arms of the colonists in breaking the oppressive yoke of George the Third.

The services were under the auspices of the Colonial Dames of America, and it was a happy conception—the celebration of the one hundred and thirtieth anniversary of the departure of British soldiers from the newly-born country and the determination of Brittania to allow her offspring to set up housekeeping on their own account.

The red coats had left, but many former subjects of George the Third concluded to remain with their brethren of the New World, and Englishmen, Scotchmen, and Irish, as well as numbers of Hessians, who had laid down their arms at Trenton, remained to cast their fortunes with the colonists. The descendents of such were mingling in Christ Church yesterday listening to a reproduction of the services when the dove of peace was hovering over our country The replica of the scenes, as near as possible, conducted in old Christ Church on that occasion, was opportune, at the time when preparations are being made for celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the Treaty of Ghent, when final peace was established between the two great English-speaking nations, an event which is to be participated in by the mother country.

While many in England were chagrined over a century ago when compelled to relinquish jurisdiction over the North American colonies, a majority of Britons had, by popular vote, showed their disapprobation of continuing the war against the colonies, and now, after many years, during which there have been occasional frictions, the best of feeling exists between the two great nations. The heroes of the revolution are praised by British historians, and the deeds of valor performed by our country are heard with gladness in the British nation. During the recent war with Spain, after the Spanish fleet and forts had been annihilated at Manila Bay and the American fleet at Santiago had destroyed the remnant of the Spanish navy, a noted Englishman rose at a banquet in London and said "the British lion is not ashamed of her cubs."

The scenes in Christ Church yesterday will long be remembered by all who were present, while those unable to attend will read the story published elsewhere in the Gazette with interest.

The original service was held at the suggestion of the Rev. David Griffith, the rector of the church, who had been a chaplain in the Continental army. His text, from which the sermon was preached yesterday—"Yea thou shall see thy children's children and peace upon Israel," also taken by the present rector for his address, will resound in ages to come.

ELKS' MEMORIAL SERVICES LAST NIGHT.

The memorial services conducted by Alexandria Lodge of Elks in respect to the memory of deceased members of that organization is an event anxiously anticipated year by year by many outside that organization. The large gathering of people of all creeds and political affiliations at the Opera House last night was evidence that interest in this annual exercise is growing, as many not present on former occasions were on hand. Scenes in connection with these exercises are beneficial to all, and the addresses and inspiring music on such occasions form food for the soul.

All secret organizations in their rituals impress upon members the immortality of the soul, and the yearly custom of the Elks in making their commeroration services a public affair, when the doors are thrown open to all, is appreciated by the hundreds who witness them year after year.

Since the organization of Alexandria Lodge of Elks—eleven years ago—twenty eight of their number have passed from this to another existence, but at these annual gatherings the dead are numbered with the living, and their memory is kept green.

The exercises last night were of an exilherating nature, and while those who have paid the debt of nature were absent in the flesh, they were regarded as present in the spirit.

The Saviour of Mankind when assailed by Sadducees (ancient agnostics) called attention to the fact that the Creator was the God of the living, not of the dead. Scenes akin to those of last night bring us closer to this great truth.

PICTURES ON TUBERCULOSIS.

Will Show Fake Consumption Cure Evil.

How thousands of consumptives lose their lives annually by taking fake cures for tuberculosis, will be depicted in a motion picture film which has just been produced by Thomas A. Edison, in co-operation with the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The film is entitled "The Price of Human Lives" and will be placed on exhibition in the Surprise Theater on Tuesday evening, December 9th. It has been designed to further the Red Cross Christmas Seal sale and the general anti-tuberculosis campaign.

The story of the picture centers about the wealthy proprietor of a drug store concern named Gregory Cort and his daughter Beth. In the earlier scenes of the play a striking contrast between the lavishly furnished Cort home and the dingy tenement room of Nellie Linn is given. While Cort and his family live in luxury and happiness, his principal source of income is derived from the sale of a fake consumption cure called "Concura." Neither his daughter nor any of his intimate friends know the exact nature of his business.

Nellie Linn is shown taking "Concura" to cure herself of a "hard cold," while her lover, Ed Grant, goes to a fake consumption cure doctor in answer to a newspaper advertisement. Beth is engaged to a young man by the name of Harry Bruce, whom Cort finally induces to become his advertising manager by showing him the huge profits high he makes in his business. Meanwhile Beth, as a result of her interest in Red Cross Christmas Seals, has enlisted as a social service worker and in this capacity becomes acquainted with Nellie and Ed. She becomes a friend of the family and attempts to urge them to stop taking fake cures for consumption including "Concura." Neither of them pay much heed to her advice until one day Nellie receives a letter telling her that a near relative had just died from tuberculosis simply because she had delayed proper treatment too long by relying on "Concura." Nellie shows the letter to Beth who declares that it is a crime to allow the manufacture and sale of such remedies. Burning with indignation, and with the wrapper of the "Concura," bottle in her hand, she goes to the office of the company, where she finds to her surprise and sorrow that the business is conducted by her own father and that her affianced husband is the chief promoter of the swindle. She refuses to recognize her lover after this discovery and forgives her father only after he has promised to make full restitution as far as he can to the suffering consumptives whom he has robbed. As part of his reformation he sends Nellie and Ed to a sanatorium, where they may be cured.

The closing scenes of the story show Gegory Cort as a changed man, Bruce is also seen in a new role, namely, as the friend of the Linn family and also as the manager of the Red Cross Seal campaign. The story closes on Christmas eve of 1913, with the lovers restored to each other, and Ed and Nellie making good progress on the road to recovery.

STEAMER ON FIRE AT SEA.

Passengers of Rio Grande Taken off by Suwannee.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 8.—One hundred and ninety-seven passengers were taken off the steamer Rio Grande at sea yesterday morning while the big ship was on fire and thought to be in danger.

The rescue was made by the Merchants and Miners' Transportation Company's steamer Suwannee, plying between Baltimore and Savannah, which caught the Rio Grande's call for assistance about 2 o'clock yesterday morning and went immediately to the rescue. The Suwanee was almost alongside the burning vessel two hours later and in response to signals from the Rio Grande lowered lifeboats and sent them to the burning ship.

The Rio Grande also had her lifeboats hanging in davits loaded with passengers when the Suwanee came up.

The rescue was made 205 miles northwest of Diamond Shoals during a severe southwest blow. There was a high sea, but such perfect discipline prevailed among the crews of both steamers that not a boat was jammed against the sides of either ship.

The crew on the Rio Grande were almost exhausted by their fight with the fire when help came.

The passengers did not know that the ship was on fire until Saturday, it is said, although some of them had spoken of the decks being hot and commented on the presence of most of the crew below decks. No passengers were permitted to go below, women and children being ordered to their staterooms.

Wireless reports, while meagre, state that after the Suwannee had taken all the passengers on board the crew helped to fight the fire on the Rio Grande.

The rescue, made before daylight far out at sea, marine men say, was one of the most thrilling recorded. The fact that not a boat was swamped and not a single life lost is considered, under the circumstances, almost miraculous.

One report from the burning ship says that after the fire was gotten under control the passengers were transferred from the Suwannee back to the Rio Grande. Another account states that some of the passengers are still on the Suwannee.

Wireless reports give the name of the burning steamer as the Rio Grande. There is no such steamer in the maritime register. Marine men say the vessel is undoubtedly the American steamer Rio Grande which plies between New York and Brunswick. The Suwannee runs between Baltimore and Savannah. She is said to be convoying the Rio Grande.

DUNS HUSBAND BY POSTAL.

Wife, From Virginia, Arrested, But Wins Sympathy.

New York, Dec. 8.—Mrs. Marie Howth-Howard, of 222 West One Hundred and Twenty-second street, recently wrote a few postal cards to her husband, telling him she was in dire need of money and asking him to send her some. On Saturday she was arrested on the charge of having sent prohibited matter through the mail.

The maximum penalty for her offense is $5,000 fine and five years' imprisonment. When she was arraigned before John A. Shields, United States Commissioner, and told her story she won the sympathy of the government officials.

Under the law Commissioner Shields was bound to hold her for the action of the grand jury, but he set her bail at $500, and later allowed her to leave the court on her own recognizance.

The complaint against the woman, who is young and attractive, was made by Anthony Comstock, at the instance of the husband.

Mrs. Howard said she is a little more than 30 years old and was married to J. D. Howth a few months after she left college. She came from Virginia to make a home for herself in New York, met Howth and was married to him after a short courtship. A year later a son was born to her, and at that time she said she and her husband adopted the name of Howard.

After living together for a few years, Mrs. Howard said, she and her husband agreed to separate, with the understanding that Howard would make her an allowance. Eventually the husband stopped sending her money and when her letters were returned unopened she decided to dun the husband on postals. She declared she did not know it is an offense to do so.

The husband, she asserted, was at one time president of a real estate company.
